KEY WORDS: circular RNAs, myotonic dystrophy type 1 (DM1), human neuromuscular disorders, pre-mRNA splicing, MBNL proteins,

Research topic: pathogenesis of human neuromuscular disorders

Principal Investigator: Marzena Wojciechowska, PhD

I. Project description

In this project we will investigate the relationship between DM1 pathogenesis and elevated levels of circular RNAs (circRNAs). It is believed that the muscleblind-like (MBNL) family proteins are involved in the process of circRNA generation; the proteins are also engaged in pathogenesis of DM1. Most recently published results have shown that regardless of functional inactivation of MBNL proteins in DM1, circRNAs expression levels are elevated in patients' skeletal muscles and in transgenic mouse model of the disease. Thus, analyses of causes and consequences of the phenomenon on the molecular level will be the main subject of this project.

Additional information:

1. Research and doctoral theses shall be carried out within the OPUS 17 UMO-2019/33/B/NZ5/02473 project, entitled "Deciphering the molecular causes and consequences of circular RNAs elevated expression levels in myotonic dystrophy type 1(DM1)", funded by National Science Center.
2. PhD students shall receive a stipend in the gross amount of ca. 4 300 PLN (3 800 PLN net). The position is scheduled until 26.11.2023, with possible extension
